Frozen: The Dragon Knight

by planer sage

Category: Frozen, How to Train Your Dragon
Genre: Adventure, Fantasy
Language: English
Status: In-Progress
Published: 2015-11-12 07:10:14
Updated: 2015-12-16 07:50:04
Packaged: 2016-04-27 10:59:59
Rating: K+
Chapters: 3
Words: 6,897
Publisher: www.fanfiction.net
Summary: Anna has gathered the four stones of the heart of infinity. Now a new journey begins. This journey will require more than strength of a princess. It will need the strength of a knight.

1. Chapter 1

Allen struggled to shore, collapsing in exhaustion. The storm had come out of nowhere and had raged for days. He had tried to save as many of his men as possible, but it was as if the sea itself rose up to drown them. He was the only one left.

"You, don't move" A voice called as a squad of green clad men ran toward him. All the former commander of the allied northern fleet could do was laugh bitterly, tears rolling down his eyes.

Frozen

The Dragon Knight

Chapter 1

Anna was practicing her sword work in the courtyard. She had skipped her etiquette lesson again. She was tired of trying her hardest to only earn insulting looks from the bitter old woman hired to teach her.

"Here you are" Ventia said from behind her.

"Do you need something? Anna asked

"You are late for your etiquette lesson" Ventia said.

"I'm not going" Anna said swinging Ask through the air.

"_A pity that you are not as graceful in everyday life as you are with a sword" _Ask said "out loud"

"Hey!" Anna said.

"I wasn't talking about that horrible old woman" Ventia said.

"Come with me" Ventia told her. Anna followed her as she led her to the empty ballroom where Elsa was waiting. Anna stopped dead looking at her older sister.

"Where is Magda?' Elsa asked.

"She has been dismissed. I will be your teacher from now on" Ventia said, causing both girls to look at her in surprise.

"Now let's begin" She said clapping. Venti turned out to be a kind and patient teacher to both girls, or at least too Anna. Elsa needed barely any instruction, but under Ventia's gentle and understanding hand Anna moved more gracefully than she ever had under Magda's severe gaze. Anna was almost gliding across the ballroom floor when their mother burst through the door.

"What happened to Magda?" Idunn demanded.

"I dismissed her" Ventia said.

"You had no right! Magda has been teaching etiquette for generations!" Idunn said.

"Then it is about time she took a well-earned retirement" Ventia responded.

"I am reinstating her, and you willâ€¦." Idunn said softly

"Will what?" Ventia asked raising an eyebrow. That was all it took for the Queen of Arendelle to completely deflate.

"That old crone was a bitter authoritarian who had no patience for one who does not fit her very narrow world view" Ventia said.

"What both you're daughters need is a gentle, more _understanding _hand" Ventia said and Idunn looked like she was struck. Elsa looked puzzled but Anna knew that Ventia did not mean just etiquette.

"Ventia, shouldn't we be getting back to work?" Anna asked brightly, trying to diffuse the situation.

"Of course" Ventia said.

"If you'll excuse us your majesty?" Ventia said. Idunn said nothing as she turned and stalked out.

"Mother?" Elsa asked following her.

"I think this lesson is over" Ventia said.

"You went too far" Anna said.

"Even after everything they've put you through you sill defend them?" Ventia asked.

"They're my parents. They were just trying to protect me. Too protect us. It's not their fault Iâ€¦" Anna said.

"You what?" Ventia asked.

"Nothing" Anna said walking away.

"Anna" Elsa called. Anna turned and looked at her sister.

"You did very well" Elsa complimented her.

"It's easy with a teacher that doesn't think you're worthless like everyone else does" Anna said smiling and thought she saw Elsa wince.

"Anna" Elsa said.

"There you are" Aquarous said.

"Yes?" Anna asked.

"Come, we have our special lesson" he said.

"Ok" Anna said turning to Elsa

"It was nice talking to you, buy" Anna said before running to catch up to Aquarous. Elsa watched her sister race off trying to hold back the hurt her words had caused.

"_Does she really think she's worthless? Does everyone else think that?_ She wondered as the temperature dropped.

"So, what special lesson is this?" Anna asked.

"Borealis and Ursa taught you the magic of the mind and the body respectively. Ventia and I will now begin teaching you the magic of the heart and soul" Aquarous said.

"Okay?" Anna asked and the man chuckled.

"You faced the magic of the soul when you fought that shadow of your sister, the composite of all you're greatest fears."

"But that is only the beginning. Magic of the mind is are the conscious spells and chants you learned from your book and from Bor. Magic of the body are the combat techniques you learned from Ursa."

"Magic of the heart will teach you to focus your emotions into your magic to increase their power and learn new spells. Magic of the soul will teach you how to tap into a deeper level of power than you ever have before, to draw magic not just from fire, but from earth and air, and if you are desperate from water and even ice." Aquarous explained. Anna just stared at him.

"Do you understand what I'm saying?" He asked.

"I think so, but the thing is it took me years to learn everything from Bor and Ursa, and now I have two more full disciplines to learn. I'll be an old lady by the time we're finished" Anna said and the man laughed.

"Maybe, maybe not. It is not like you have anything pressing to attend to" Aquarous said giving her a penetrating look.

"But what about the heart?" Anna asked.

"Do not worry about that" Aquarous. Anna knew better than to argue with one of her teachers.

"Now, let us begin" He said. The process of learning soul magic, of drawing magical energy from around her to help fuel her, was grueling and seemed impossible. It required her to draw heat from the sun for fire, energy from the air for air, and power from the ground underneath her from earth. It was like trying to look in three different directions at once.

"You are trying to do too much. Draw from one source at a time" Aquarous said when she told him this. She took a deep breath and tried again, focusing on fire first. Drawing energy from the sun was hard, like breathing through a thick blanket, and she felt like she was using more energy than she was gaining.

"You must learn to draw energy as efficiently as possible, particularly as a fire drake. The solar energy in these northern lands are much weaker than in other parts of the world. If you can draw the maximum of energy here, then the energy you will gain in warmer regions will be that much more powerful" Aquarous said.

"I hate resistance training" Anna gasped worn out.

"That is enough for today" Aquarous said. The next day she started practicing heart magic with Ventia.

"Aquarous told me that this would help increase my powers?" Anna asked.

"That is an oversimplification. This magic is very dangerous to use. It takes your emotions and uses them to amplify you're powers. However you must have full control of your emotions when doing this, or risk falling into the dragons rage" Ventia explained.

"Dragons rage?" Anna asked.

"If you should lose control of your emotions while using them to feed you're powers, if you should let your anger and rage consume you, you lose all reason, and destroy anything and everyone around you" Ventia warned, and she felt herself go pale.

"Do I have a choice of learning this?" Anna asked.

"No. as a fire drake you are particularly suited to this form of magic, and particularly vulnerable. You're optimistic and pure hearted nature had ensured you have not fallen prey to more negative emotions, but that will not always be the case, particularly considering you're family life" Ventia said frowning.

"I'm fine" Anna said smiling.

"Then let's begin" Ventia said. Anna thought soul magic was hard. It was a cakewalk compared to learning how to feed her emotions into her magic. First it required her to feel strong emotion. Many people told her she wore her heart on her sleeve but that just made it that much harder for her to dredge up the strong emotions she needed.

"That's the problem with wearing you're heart on your sleeve. You feel too lightly, too genuinely" Ventia said.

"Well sorry if I can't suppress everything likeâ€¦" Anna said.

"Like Elsa" Ventia finished.

"You're sister is the other side of the coin. Suppressing ones emotions like that is not healthy especially for someone with her powers. It's going to cause a disaster one day" Ventia said.

"Don't worry. Once the stone is complete and I get my wish, that won't be a problem." Anna said.

"You never did say what your wish is" Ventia said.

"Let's try this again" Anna said. The days past and slowly Anna learned how to both draw energy from all around her, and how to use her own emotions to bolster her spells. She mostly relied on her resolve and love for her family and sister. Using them as a focus she felt almost invincible when she spared with Ursa who began to actually struggle to defeat her.

"I think I'm getting better" She said panting hard after one particularly grueling session. All her combat teacher did was pant just as hard as she stared at her.

"I can't believe how strong she's getting" Ursa said as the four of them gathered in Bors workroom.

"Are you sure you aren't getting old?" Aquarous teased, earning a soft swat.

"Still, to be mastering all four paths like this" Ventia said.

"I keep telling you, she's the one" Borealis said.

"She's a half breed" Ursa said earning a frown from the other three.

"Yes. As the prophecy states. One who walks in both worlds but belonging to neither?" Aquarous quoted.

"The master of all paths" Ventia said.

"The one who will be both caster and mount" Ursa muttered.

"Plunging herself into the void shall restore all from it" Borealis finished.

"Empty prophecy." Ursa growled.

"Then why train her?" Ventia asked.

"Because she needed training" Ursa replied.

"Prophecy or not, Anna is the first Oreboran born since the ophidian realm was destroyed, and the most powerful any of us ever seen." Borealis said.

"Ursa is right. No matter what the reason, Anna must be trained. Her sister is lost to us, a slave to her parents and her own fear. That is frightening enough with her power. If Anna should go down the same path" Borealis said.

"You want the girl as a safety net should Elsa lose control or turn dark" Ursa said.

"The older is a caster unlike anything I have ever seen, and Idunn is too much of a coward to let us teach her properly. So yes, Anna might have to be the one to deal with her sister should her power go out of control" Borealis said.

"That will be a discussion or another time" Ventia said frowning.

"So who wants to tell the girl we lied to her about not knowing where the darkness and light stones were?" Ursa said.

Okay, the first chapter of Frozen: The Dragon Knight. Sorry for such a long wait. **

2. Darkness and Light

Frozen: The Dragon Knight

Chapter 2

Darkness and Light

"You what?" Anna screamed at Ventia. By common consent they had decided she was the best choice to tell Anna the truth.

"Anna, I'm sorry, but you aren't ready to hunt the light and dark stones. Part of your training in the soul and heart paths is so that you can gain the discipline to learn how to use both light and dark magic" Ventia explained.

"Wait what?" Anna asked

"In order for you to even survive finding the stones you need to learn how to use magic they represent" Ventia explained.

"So on top of two new disciplines I have to learn two new magic's" Anna groaned.

"Getting ones wish isn't easy" Ventia said smiling. So the next three years were spent mastering all her new skills. Every day was full of learning and training, not just magic, but also all her practical skills which more and more were taken up by her teachers. Under their tutelage Anna learned far better than with the other tutors their parents hired. Also along with etiquette her teachers taught her more about the history of the dragon born than Borealis had"

"Wait, dragon born are gods?" Anna asked after learning about the celestial realm of oraboros, the home of the dragon born.

"If that is what you wish to call them" Aquarous said.

"Oreboran are very similar to other celestial beings such as the Asgardians or the Olympians. We have magic as you know, but we are also virtually ageless" He said.

"What about me?" Anna asked.

"We are not sure. For certain you will be extremely long lived, but you are also half human. Whether that means you're life span will be measured in centuries, millennia, or if you will be as ageless as the rest of us when you are mature, none of us can tell" Aquarous explained.

"Oh" Was all Anna could say.

"You are a very special case Anna" Aquarous said.

"Not only are you the first Oreboran born after our races destruction, but all dragon born without exception come into their power at maturity. Every one, except you. You are the first of our kind to come into you're power at such an early age" He said.

"It's nice to be special, I guess" Anna said rubbing the back of her head.

"Hey, if I'm going to live so long, doesn't that make travel into the future dangerous?" She asked.

"That's a question best answered by Borealis. For now try not to dwell on it" Aquarous said. While Aquarous taught her about dragon born history, which was completely fascinating, Ventia taught her about dragon born culture.

"Wait, so Elsa is a caster?" Anna asked after Ventia had explained there had been two kinds of people that had lived in Oraboros.

"Yes. She is an ice caster" Ventia said. According to her, casters were people born with the ability to channel one element to cast magic. While they could only cast a single element, the power they had to draw on was almost infinite.

"That is their strength. Can you tell me the strength of a dragon born?" Ventia asked.

"Our versatility. Because we have access to all the elements we can cast spells a caster can't" Anna said.

"Very good" Ventia said. On her tenth birthday she began learning light magic. A prerequisite for learning light magic was mastering emotion magic.

"You must be able to focus positive emotions into pure energy. That is the one and only key to light magic" Ventia explained.

"That's why it's so dangerous. Keeping yourself positive like that, whether for a long casting or during a battle is hard" Anna said.

"Yes. Now try it" Ventia said. Anna nodded. She took a deep breath and quieting her mind (which surprisingly wasn't hard) focused on nothing but positive emotions.

"_Think happy thoughts"_ Flitted over the surface of her mind as she dredged up her love for her parents, who she still loved deeply despite what they did to her memories. She brought up the love for her teachers, who more and more became her family. And Elsa. She brought up all the love for her sister, the one person she looked up too, and the one she tried to be like, the one person in the world she would give anything for. She took that love, that light and turning it into energy focused it into her hands. A small ball of pure white light formed between her hands. Anna laughed, feeling pure joy, which caused the light ball to pulse and explode, knocking her off her feet.

"Are you alright?" Ventia asked Anna who just laughed. Light magic was hard. Keeping her emotions steady was the hardest part, but eventually she learned how to keep them under control. It didn't mean she was emotionless. She felt more than ever, she was just able to keep focused, which helped in keeping herself cherry and positive, especially when around Elsa who acted colder and more distant than ever. Her eleventh birthday she began to learn dark magic.

"Do I have too?" Anna asked Aquarous, slightly scared.

"There must be a balance of light and dark in all of us" Was all he said. She gathered her courage and took a breath. Just like light magic worked on positive emotions, dark magic worked on negative. That was why resolve and courage was needed. Resolve to delve into ones darker nature and courage to focus those emotions without losing themselves. She brought up her anger at her parents who had her memories erased and separated her from Elsa. She brought up her frustration at her teachers for forcing her to learn this. And she brought up all the feelings of anger and resentment for her sister. The anger that Elsa had gone along with her parents in shutting her out. The Jealousy at how she was the apple of everyone's eye while she was considered the spare. And the resentment toward her whole family for shutting her out, of doing all this without her knowledge or permission. A black globe of energy emerged in her hands, a product of every bad thought she ever had.

"What are you doing?!" A voice shrieked and the globe imploded into itself, leaving Anna feeling like her soul had been ripped out.

"How did you get in here?" Aquarous asked as Idunn stalked in.

"I may not have my magic, but I can still get around you little charms" Idunn said.

"Anna are you alright?" Idunn asked concerned.

"Get out!" Anna hissed, her dark emotions still swirling, the only thing she was feeling being anger.

"Anna?" Idunn asked.

"Get out!" Anna shouted, her hand engulfed in black flame. Aquarous stepped forward and put his hand on Anna's head. A wave of something passed through her, scouring away the darkness and sending her into unconsciousness. The man caught the girl as she fell.

"You have no idea what you almost caused" He said softly.

"You are teaching her darkness magic?" Idunn demanded.

"We are teaching her everything" Aquarous said.

"That's impossible" Idunn said.

"Not for her. She is close to mastering all four paths and light magic" The man said putting his hand on the girls head and making sure her darker emotions had not poisoned her.

"Her darkness is more powerful than I thought. You're actions have caused her more pain than I think even she realizes" Aquarous said.

"She who walks in two worlds, belonging to neither" Idunn whispered sinking to her knees.

"There's nothing I can do for her is there?" She whispered.

"You were a brilliant student Idunn, and talented, but you were always too meager in spirit" Aquarous said.

"Me, Agdar, even Elsa. Where has Ann gotten her courage from?" She asked.

"I want to help. I may not have my magic, but I still have my knowledge, and if this is Anna's destiny, I want to be there for her" Idunn said.

"Even if it leads to Anna's destruction, after everything you've done to protect her?" Aquarous said, which earned a rueful laugh.

"How have we protected her? Either of them. Agdar will not bend on the current situation, especially with you all here and Bor's curse on us" Idunn said, tears working down her eyes.

"Anna is hiding something from us" Ventia said appearing behind them. The woman walked over to the girl and kneeling down put Anna's head in her lap.

"I have seen hints of it. I am concerned about just what her wish will be when the heart is reformed" Ventia said.

"What do you mean?" Idunn asked.

"When she found my heart, I sensed troll magic on her. Without thinking I reached out and performed a heart purge on her" She said running her hand across the white braid.

"You what?" Idunn asked going white.

"She remembered everything, and she believes what happened is all her fault. I fear that when the heart is reformed she may use her wish to undo her own existence" Ventia whispered. If Idunn could have gone any whiter she would have.

"Are you sure?" Aquarous asked.

"No, and I do not want to force the issue" Ventia said.

"But if her wish isâ€¦" Aquarous said.

"Her wish is her own. She is working so hard to learn what we have to teach her, she has risked her life every time she found one of our hearts. She has earned the right to make whatever wish she wills, even if her wish is to have never existed" Ventia said looking at Idunn. The queen looked down at her youngest, the one everyone, even she and her husband had written off as a spare. The one they cherished for being cheerful, positive and strong, but didn't trust with the simplest secrets or responsibility.

"You're right. She's earned the right to make her own choices, for once in her life" Idunn said. At about this time the girl they were talking about began to stir and open her eyes.

"Welcome back" Ventia said.

"Mama?" Anna asked seeing Idunn.

"I'm right here darling" She said.

"Are you alright, I didn't mean to" She said sitting up.

"I know. Believe me I know how dangerous darkness magic can be" She said.

"I would like to help, if I may?" She asked.

"Right. You used to be a dragon born too" Anna said rubbing her head. Anna's training continued, only now with Idunn encourage her and helping explain the more complicated aspects of magic in the special way only a mother could explain things to her child. As she watched Idunn was amazed at her daughter's prowess. Like everyone else she had compared her to Elsa. And even though she loved Anna her with all her heart, had expected about as much from her flighty excitable, unfocused and slightly uncultured daughter as everyone else.

"Even the greatest knights weren't half as strong as she is" She told Borealis one day as they watched they watched her spar with Ursa.

"And she is far from reaching her full potential" Borealis said.

"The reason we had her memory wiped it was because we were worried about her being exposed Elsa's magic" Idunn said.

"The image that was conjured during her challenge was that of her sister" Borealis said.

"Though a shadow of your eldest power, Anna still prevailed."

Borealis said.

"And that was when she was far less trained than she is now" Borealis said.

"So as she is now, Anna could take whatever Elsa could throw at her" Idunn said.

"Forget it" Anna suddenly said.

"Excuse me?" Idunn asked.

"You think that Elsa and I can be together again because I have my own magic to protect me" Anna said.

"Wellâ€¦yes" Idunn said.

"And people call me dumb" Anna said.

"Pardon me?" Idunn asked.

"Do you really think that after all these years the two of us can just show our powers to each other and we'll be sisters again?" Anna asked.

"We've been apart for seven years, barely speaking to each other" Anna said looking away.

"All the more reason to try" Idunn said and Anna shook her head.

"I already have a plan" Anna said.

"Wiping yourself from existence isn't a plan!" Idunn scolded.

"How did youâ€¦never mind. I don't care. It's not you're wish it's mine" Anna responded.

"Why?" Idunn demanded.

"Because it's my fault!" Anna shouted, tears running down her eyes.

"It was my fault. I was the one who treated Elsa's powers like a toy. I was the one who wouldn't slow down. And now, because of me, she's been afraid of the best thing about her. She's isolated herself from you, from papa, from life. As the spareâ€¦as the spare it's my job to undue that. My responsibility to protect the heir, no matter what" Anna said.

"I'm going to fix what I did wrong. I'm going to give Elsa back the life that I stole" Anna said smiling brightly with tears in her eyes. Idunn didn't say anything as she looked at her youngest. Then she stepped forward and wrapping the girl in a tight hug wept.

"_Did I say something wrong?"_ Anna thought as her mother sobbed.

Okay, I honestly don't know how good this chapter is. I'm really trying hard not to Mary Sue her but it's kind of hard considering that's kind of her personality in the movie. Mostly I wanted to focus on her new powers her inherent stubbornness in the face of common sense, and some of her more negative emotions. Beside if she and Elsa reconciled now, the story would end. **

3. Race to the Edge

Frozen: The Dragon Knight

Race to the edge

It was her twelfth birthday, and Anna had just finished mastering darkness magic. The only thing she could say was that she hated it. Wringing out her darkest emotions to fuel it will keeping herself from tearing down everything around her in a rage was the hardest thing she had ever done, making darkness magic a technique of last resort. Ever since the day she told her mother her wish, Idunn had never brought it up again. She had been a shoulder to lean on, and a tender ear and a welcome tutor, but she never again tried to stop Anna from doing what she was planning. Which she was grateful for.

"_She understands that this is what I really want"_ She thought as she swung ask in downward, working on her sword strokes.

"_Is it?"_ Ask asked.

"Don't you start" Anna said.

"_We are all concerned. You have such potential, one never seen before, and you would cast it away so easily?" _He asked.

"What are you saying?" Anna asked holding up the blade.

"_Go to Elsa. Talk to her. Work out you're differences" _Ask advised.

"I keep telling everyone. That doesn't fix the past. The years of confinement and fear. No. I'm going to erase what happened" She said.

"_But why oblivion? Would it not also make sense to just erase what happened?"_ the blade asked.

"I thought about that. But what if I did that, and I didn't get my powers? Or worse what if I did? Elsa could still hurt me again, and we would be right back where we started. Or worse we could get into a fight with our magic's and cause who knows what damage. Its better if a just stepped out of the picture" Anna said.

"You know, you haven't brought up the fact that if I do this, you and I would never meet" Anna said and could almost hear the sword snort.

"_Those in the presence of the heart are not effected by whatever wish is enacted unless specifically included in the wish itself" _Ask said.

"How did you know that?" She asked going back to swinging.

"_I have my own experience with the heart" _Was all the blade said, and Anna knew not to push.

"Anna, Borealis wants to see you" Her mother said stepping into the room. Over the past year, she had seen the burden on her mother ease as she had become reacquainted with her teachers, who it turned out were her old friends. Perhaps the fact that she and Anna could talk about Elsa's powers, and the trouble she was having with them also helped.

"How's Elsa doing?" Anna asked as they walked.

"Fine. Acing her lessons" Idunn said

"Of course" Anna said rolling her eyes and causing her mother to smile.

"And has she had anyâ€¦accidents?" Anna asked.

"A few, but nothing major" Idunn said.

"Don't worry. It will be better soon" Anna said. Her mother remained silent as they entered Borealis work room. Each of her teachers had taken a room in the castle andâ€¦redecorated it using magic. Borealis had formed a workroom, Ursa a training ground, Aquarous a meditation garden, and Ventiaâ€¦Anna blushed just thinking about it. While she had known about the woman's maternal side, she had no idea about herâ€¦sensual side. Part of her room was warm and homey like a grandmothers den, the other slightly more risquÃ©. Along with her training in Oreboran culture, Ventia had also taught her moreâ€¦practical arts that would have horrified her mother, or if she did know didn't show it. Anna shook the thought away. As much as she was becoming interested in romance and dreamed of her prince charming, she knew that's all it was, a dream. She knew that if everything went right, she would never have that chance, and had resigned herself to that.

"There you are" Borealis said.

"Yes?" Anna asked.

"It is time to renew you're search" He said.

"Finally" Anna said.

"So where do I start?" Anna asked.

"Hand me you're book" he said. Anna did so and he placed his hand on it. A white light glowed between its pages and he handed it back to her.

"I have given you the location of the first two stones" He said.

"First two?" Anna asked.

"the darkness and light aspects of the stones were so powerful that when the stone was divided the darkness and light were subdivided into eight and followed each of our hearts into hiding, one pair of dark and light for each but in different times and places" He said as

Anna opened her book.

"The first two are back in Berkâ€¦no not in Berk, but the same general place, about three years from the first time I visited" She said reading the new pages that hadn't been their when she had last looked mere days ago.

"Now you know where you're going and you are as prepared as you can be" Borealis said. Together they walked down into the garden. She felt one of her masters cast an invisibility spell to shield them. She took a deep breath and gripping her Chrono's stone stepped into the time stream. Even though it had been years since she had traveled to Berk, the path back was familiar and far less taxing than it had been the first time. She stepped out of time centuries in the past on top of the hill where the castle would one day stand. Wasting no time she transformed and shot into the sky making her way to Berk.

"_Whoa"_ She thought as the island came into view.

"_I take it the island did not look like this the last time you were here"_ Ask commented.

"No it wasn't she said as she flew over the island now converted into a dragon habitat with perches, nests, food troughs and a dozen other things she couldn't put a name to. She landed on a much nicer landing pad than last time and transformed back to human. Her need to find hiccup couldn't keep her from getting lost in how much Berk had changed since she was here last.

"_Ann, we must find this hiccup"_ Ask reminded her.

"_In a minute"_ she said as she watched a group of terrible terrors at play. She surprised by a sharp whack to the back of her head.

"Hey!" She said whirling around to find a bent old woman glaring up at her.

"Can I help you?" Anna asked only to be smacked again.

"Stop that" Anna said when the woman poked her to get her moving.

"Ow, excuse me" She said as the woman continued to poke her, prodding her into motion. Not wanting to cause trouble she let the woman lead her to the great hall and inside. She gestured for Anna to sit before calling to a terrible terror. She wrote something on a small piece of paper and sent the dragon off before turning and looking at her with a fierce glare.

"What?" Anna asked but the woman didn't answer.

"Alright Gothe, what's the big emergency?" a familiar voice said as the door was pushed open.

"Stoic" Anna said happily. The big man glared at her for a moment before his eyes widened.

"Lass?" He asked.

"Yeah, it's me" Anna said smiling brightly only to have Gothe smack her in the head again.

"Would you quit that?" Anna asked as the woman squiggled on the floor.

"She wants to know why you've returned here lass, considering the trouble you brought last time" Gobber said.

"Why didn't she just ask me herself?" Anna asked causing the woman to raise her stick again.

"I'm here for two heart fragments. Fragments of the light and dark heart" She said and the old women's face went pale as she began to scribble furiously.

"She says go home. Searching for the heart of air was dangerous enough, but trying to find the hearts of light and darkness will bring nothing but disaster to everyone" Gobber said.

"I can't stop. I need to find them" Anna said.

"I promise to protect everyone from danger" She added.

"That's a very big promise to make" Gobber said.

"I can do it. I'm a knight now" Anna said.

"Really. The last time I saw yeh you were a wee babe as wet behind the ears as a squaldron and now yeh say yer a knight?" Stoic asked skeptically.

"That was seven years ago. I'm stronger now" Anna said. The woman Gothe wrote on the ground.

"Prove it" Gobber translated.

"How?" Anna asked.

"Take you to Hiccup and the others. Let them keep an eye on you" Gobber said.

"Wait what?" Anna asked.

"We're not letting ya run around free ta do what ya please. If yer gonna look for more of these dangers magic's then yer going to have a minder" Stoic said.

"So where is Hiccup?" Anna asked and didn't like the grin on Stoics face at the question. It turned out Hiccup and the others had set up their own base on an island almost a day's flight from Berk. Stoic led the way on a massive dark green brown dragon that was much faster than it looked. Even with all her training her wings were starting to ach by the end of the journey and she was happy when the base called dragons edge came into view. They saw hiccup waiting for them on a landing area, toothless by his side. Anna was surprised by how much older he looked. Even as a dragon she could tell how much taller he had grown and he had changed his sheep skin coat and homespun cloths for a leather outfit. They landed and Anna transformed back racing up to Hiccup to hug him.

"Whoa. Anna is that you?" He asked putting his hands on her shoulders.

"Surprise" She said smiling at him.

"Dad?" Hiccup asked.

"She showed up out of nowhere looking for more of them hearts. We thought it best to leave it to you" Stoic said. Hiccup looked at Anna smiling brightly at him and smacked his face with his hand. Stoic stayed for a few hours to rest his dragon following Hiccup as he showed Anna the base.

"This place is so cool" Anna said as they came into the meeting hall.

"We try" Hiccup couldn't help but brag.

"So ya think you can make room for her?" Stoic asked.

"I don't take up that much space" Anna said.

"I think we can find something. But Anna, understand that while you stay here, you follow our rules. You listen to us" Hiccup said.

"Okay" Anna said trying not to roll her eyes.

"Now, let's tell the other riders about our guest" Hiccup said.

"NO WAY!" Snotlout shouted.

"Awesome!" The twins shouted.

"Sure, why not" Astrid said.

"This is so exciting" Fishlegs gushed as he hugged Anna and lifted her up.

"Nice to see you again too" Anna half gasped as she was set down.

"Do you remember the last time she was here? She summoned a dragon that almost blew Berk off the face of the earth!" Snotlout roared.

"Excuse me. You summoned Borealis because you tried to steal the heartâ€¦twice" Anna shot back.

"You set me on fire!" Snotlout said.

"So, I thought that happened to you all the time?" She asked, causing the other riders to laugh.

"Don't worry. I already promised Hiccup to be on my best behavior and to do what I'm told" She said. All the boy did was glare at her.

"Okay, okay settle down. Snotlout, Anna's staying with us for the foreseeable future" Hiccup said.

"Fine" he grunted.

"So, where do I sleep?" Anna asked.

"You'll bunk with me" Astrid said.

"Now that that's settled let's see about this new heart you want to find" Hiccup said. Anna explained about the heart of light and darkness, and how they were somewhere.

"Somewhere, that's all you've got?" Snotlout asked.

"Um, yeah?" Anna asked softly.

"Maybe trader Yohan has some information?" Fishlegs asked.

"I mean he had the map to the heart of air last time" He added.

"But wasn't the heart of air sort of the worst kept secret on Berk?" Anna asked. The look on the rider's faces was answer enough.

"Maybe, but Yohan is still our best bet. And he's due to visit Berk tomorrow" Hiccup said.

"So I flew all the way out here, just to fly all the back?" Anna asked.

"Rest up" Astrid said. The next day found her trekking back to Berk this time carrying two empty baskets.

"If you're going to stay you're going to earn your keep" Snotlout had jeered at her as he tossed the baskets at her.

"Hate to say it, but Snotlouts right" Astrid agreed.

"Always happy to help" Anna said as she transformed and slung the baskets over her "shoulders". Hours later she found herself working her sore shoulders as a human on Berk.

"You okay?" Hiccup asked.

"My teachers warned me to exercise as a dragon. Now I know why" She said

"_And now I know why Ursa always complained about never being able to train me in dragon form" _She thought to Ask.

"_If you go without using your dragon form for too long, it's the same as not using a muscle. You've used it so little over the years I'm surprised you can still fly" _ask added.

"I definitely need to make time to train as a dragon somehow" Anna said out loud.

"If you're hanging around, I'd be happy to pick up where we left off" Astrid said.

"You mean where I was a kid you tried to feed to your dragon?" Anna asked.

"Exactly" Astrid replied, and the two of them laughed.

"Alright you two, we need to find Yohan" Hiccup said as they walked toward the docks.

"And pick up supplies" Fishlegs said.

"Anna and I will find Yohan, the rest of you resupply" Hiccup said and they split up.

"So what if Yohan isn't here?" Anna asked.

"Then we wait until he arrives" Hiccup said. Unfortunately when they reached the docks they found the trader hadn't arrived yet.

"Looks like were waiting" Anna sighed.

"A day or two won't hurt" Hiccup said.

"So, what's new with you?" Hiccup asked very unsubtly.

"Besides the fact that I'm seven years older than when you last saw me?" She asked.

"Yeah besides that" hiccup said.

"I've remembered what it is I did too my sister" Anna said.

"Really?" hiccup asked intrigued.

"I thought you said you needed the heart to save your family?" He said.

"That wasn't the whole truth. When I said I needed to save my family, it was from lies and seclusion. I needed the heart as part of a quest to fix a mistake I made that made my sister hate me and shut me out of her life and for our parents to shut us away from the world" Anna explained and told Hiccup everything, about her life, her sister and her powers, and the accident. The one thing she held back was her wish. That she would keep to herself from now on.

"There's no way you're a princess" Hiccup said after Anna had finished her story.

Okay, third chapter. Schools over so I should have more time to focus on my story so updates should come sooner. **

End file.